Participation in an international short-term entrepreneurship program with the University of Adelaide and the University of Strasbourg, February 2-3, 2019

You are interested in starting your own business or in experiencing how the start-up business really works? Then grasp the opportunity and hand in your application: Freiburg students are eligible to participate in a one weekend intensive short-term program at ThincLab Châlons-en-Champagne/France. This is a truly international experience as Freiburg participants will liaise with students from the University of Adelaide/Australia and the University of Strasbourg/France.

Outline of the program

- One weekend program: Saturday to Sunday, February 2 and 3, 2019
- Explore entrepreneurial concepts with industry professionals at Châlons ThincLab:
 - The importance of entrepreneurial founding teams across contexts,
 - The process of idea generation, design thinking and concept development,
 - The development of a sound business model, and
 - How to build and present an effective pitch.
- The program will be run completely in English.
- Accommodation and meals mentioned in the preliminary program (see following page) will be covered by the University of Adelaide.
- Freiburg participants will be granted a travelling allowance by the International Office of the University of Freiburg.
- All other expenses apart from that need to be borne by the participants.

Application

- All matriculated students at the University of Freiburg who are interested in the topic are eligible for the program.
- Please hand in your application until October 14, 2018 at the latest via this link:
<https://www.adelaide.edu.au/thinclub/chalons/thinclub-intensive>
- Freiburg students who participate in the program are expected to highlight their experiences by handing in a short reflection/summary of the weekend at Châlons ThincLab which will be published on the International Office's website.
